One hundred and fifty patients have undergone tibial nerve stimulation (TNS) following exhaustion of other treatment strategies and with a final diagnosis of peripheral nerve pain for at least 3 months. On the basis of the results TNS is effective in 51.7% of cases. More severe pain is related to a better response to stimulation (p less than 0.01). Other variables such as sex, age, duration of the disease and type of pain have not significantly influenced the efficacy of the technique. TNS is effective in "burn", polyneuropathies and postoperative pain, but does not provide relief in postherpetic neuralgia. The procedure can be conducted in outpatient clinics since it involves a low rate of complications.Q: NSView doesn't have a WantsLayer property I have a NSView subclass which has the following code in its awakeFromNib method: [NSView setWantsLayer: YES]; When I run my application, I get the error: NSView doesn't have a WantsLayer property or method When I run the same code in a NSWindow it works fine. It also works fine when I run it in a NSView subclass of NSImageView. A: It turns out that when you subclass NSView, NSView inherits from NSView, not NSViewController. As such it inherits the base NSView superclass method and not the extended version. Q: Get the xml root node as the last node I'm new to xslt and I'm having trouble with this, I have this xml: b7e8fdf5c8
