9 million men a year experience some form of ED. [url= cialis pills[/url] In fact, on any given day, approximately 100 million prescriptions are filled, of which about half are for ED. And there are a number of treatments that work to help a man get back to normal erections. [url= tablets for sale[/url] One of the leading ED drugs on the market today, Viagra, has had a problem that had been a thorn in Pfizer's side for years. Although it's a very well-known brand name, the manufacturers of Viagra have been accused of manufacturing too many impotent tablets. Viagra is the only real oral ED drug that actually works, in the vast majority of cases. [url= vs viagra[/url] While getting the drug became a huge marketing success for Pfizer, it left the company with a major headache. When Viagra came on the market, many men did not have any real symptoms of ED. So they were unable to get the test to see if their erections were genuine or not. [url= prices[/url] This meant that men would take Viagra, and when they were done they would come out of the drug store feeling great and thinking that they had had a normal erection. [url=
